RESEARCH PROFESSIONAL

We seek a highly skilled and motivated post-doctoral student in economics or finance to work as a full-time Research Professional for a period of one year. Our preferred start date is July 2018, and end date June 2019, but this is flexible.

The Research Professional will assist Zhiguo He, Professor of Finance at University of Chicago Booth School of Business, with the preparation of an MBA-level course, and, more relevantly, with ongoing research projects.

The main focus of the Research Professional will be the support of current research projects on finance and Chinese markets. Potentially, the assistance provided will develop into co-authorship.

Besides, the Research Professional will support Professor He on teaching and preparing material for his MBA-level course, Chinese Economy and Financial Markets.

The ideal candidate will possess (i) a doctoral degree; (ii) a strong quantitative background; (iii) strong computer skills including programming; and (iv) a long-term interest in pursuing research in China financial markets. Applicants must be in a PhD program or be a recent graduate of a PhD program, and must be able to read, write, and speak Chinese fluently.

The position is funded by the Becker Friedman Institute. We offer a competitive pay and provide standard University benefits such as health insurance.
